INTRODUCTION.

In editing the text of the Mahavagga, as the first instalment of a complete edition of the Pâli VINAYA PITAKA, it may be well to say something as to the object of the undertaking. It is manifestly important that the entire text of the Buddhist Holy Writings should be made accessible to all who are desirous of acquiring a thorough knowledge of one of the most important historical phenomena of India, namely, Buddhism. There are, however, objections to the publication of the complete Tipitaka. Every one acquainted with the mode of expression employed in the earlier Buddhist works knows with what wearisome diffuseness the religious doctrines and ordinances are there set forth, how constantly the same thoughts and phrases are repeated, and how irritating to European readers is the excessive use of synonymous expressions. It may well be asked, therefore, whether it would not be sufficient to give mere extracts from the text, instead of the text itself, with all its formality and repetition? Those, however, who, being engaged in historical investigations, have been obliged to work from mere extracts, will know the advantage of being able to refer to the original works. When even those who made the extracts find in them an imperfect help, it is not surprising that to others they should be still less able to supply the place of the sources themselves. Every reader has his own questions to put to the original text, and will study it from his own particular point of view; hence it is impossible that extracts, however carefully made, can satisfy the requirements of every reader. Such extracts also, while showing but imperfectly what the text contains, show still less what it omits to mention. So, although many points may be cleared up even by so imperfect an acquaintance with the sources as is afforded by extracts, yet to those who wish to be complete masters of the subject, and must therefore study the smallest details, the publication of the complete text will not be unwelcome.

Being compelled to relinquish my original intention of adding a complete translation of the text, I have thought it well to lay before my readers—in the form of an Introduction—my views as to the origin of the works which I have undertaken to edit, and as to their historical position in the literature of which they form part.

Both in the Holy Writings, and also in the earliest Buddhist works that we possess, we find the Vinaya systematically compared and contrasted with the Dilamma; and indeed, where both are mentioned. Dhamma is frequently named first and Vinaya second. This regular system of comparison between Dhamma and Vinaya appears throughout the sacred literature, which, in the earlier period, consisted of two large collections of works (Piţaka), of which one comprised the Vinaya and the other the Dhamma; and at a later period, consisted of three collections, of which the first was devoted to the Vinaya and the other two to the Dhamma. Of the earlier of these two systems (which possessed a DVIPIŢAKA, but knew nothing of the Tipitaka) we get an admirably clear account from the closing chapter of the Cullavagga, which I propose to edit when I have finished the Mahâvagga. This important chapter gives us the earliest known account of the first two great Councils of the Buddhist Church. We learn from it that in the Council of Râjagaha, Kassapa, the President of the Assembly, opened the proceedings for the consecrative settlement of the Holy Texts with these words, "Ye venerable men, let the congregation hear me. If the congregation is ready, I will question Upâli respecting the Vinaya." Whereupon Kassapa questioned Upâli respecting the Vinaya. This being done, he addressed a second speech to the assembly: "Ye venerable men, let the congregation hear me. If the congregation is ready, I will question Ananda about the Dhamma." Whereupon he questioned Ananda respecting the five collections (pañca nikâvâ), beginning with the Brahmajâlasutta. Hereby, according to this account, the whole work of the revision of Dhamma and Vinaya is The five Nikâvas are undoubtedly the brought to an end. five well-known collections included in the Suttapitaka. These five collections therefore—according to the idea of the age in which this account of the two Councils originated -contained the whole of the Dhamma as taught by The series of works which was subsequently called Suttapitaka was even at that time well known; the collection of the Abhidhammapitaka was either altogether unknown, or was not regarded as canonical or of the same value as the two other Pitakas; and it was generally supposed that, in the council held after Buddha's death, it had not been admitted by the Theres into the collection of the Dhammavinaya or of the Jinavacana.

The important difference between the more recent Buddhist literature and that of the more ancient period, viz. the transition from the Dvipitaka to the Tipitaka, becomes more marked if we compare the above account taken from the Cullavagga with an account of the same Council given by Buddhaghosa in his introduction to the commentary on the Dîghanikâya.1 The two accounts are in most respects similar, but they differ altogether with regard to the extent and division of the sacred texts collected at the first Council. In both we have the report of the revision of the Vinaya, and in both, after this is over, Kassapa addresses the assembly with the words, "If the congregation is ready, I will question Ananda about the Dhamma." But in the latter account, before the revision of the Dhamma is begun, Kassapa puts the following question to the Theras: "Which of the two collections (pitaka) shall we proceed with first?" and they answer, "The collection of the Suttanta." This collection, beginning with the Brahmajâla, is then revised: they then pass on to the second part of the Dhamma, namely, the Abhidhamma; and in this manner the revision of the Dhammavinava is brought to a close.²

It would be out of place here to enter into a discussion as to the period to which the more recent Dhamma literature, known as the Abhidhamma, belongs; for the purposes of this research it will suffice to state, as indeed we have already seen, that from the very earliest times the whole spiritual teaching of the Master was presented to the Buddhist community in a double form, as the Dhamma and Vinaya; and this dualism, so to speak, is reflected in the literature, in the earliest style of its development, in the two Pitakas.

The difference between the Dhamma and Vinaya cannot be very clearly defined, and it would be difficult to lay down any very broad line of distinction between the two. Many sections of the Vinaya are met with again in the Dhamma, and not unfrequently are repeated word for word. This, however, is not so much owing to the want of a definite idea regarding the different provinces of the two categories, as to a certain carelessness displayed in the revision of the texts. Many additions were made to the text of the Vinaya, in order to explain the origin and the meaning of the different ecclesiastical ordinances, and various passages from the Dhamma came to be inserted in the Vinayapitaka in this way. It is important therefore, in reading the Vinayapitaka, to avoid being misled by such additions as to what are the chief and essential contents of this Pitaka.

Looking at what is essential in the Vinavapitaka, we may define it as a collection of rules regulating the outward conduct of the Sangha and Bhikkhus.2 It does not therefore deal with purely ethical questions, except so far as these affect such outward conduct; nor does it deal with outward conduct generally, but only with the outward conduct of the Samgha and the Bhikkhus.3 The Dhamma, on the other hand, includes the Samgha, except that the rules regulate the conduct of the Bhikkhus towards

¹ For instance, the passages in Mahavagga, I. 6. 38-46, are also found in the Suttapitaka under the title of Anattalakkhanasutta, and those in Mahavagga, VI. 28-30, are almost identical with parts of the Mahaparimbbanasutta. Compare also M. Feer's Etudes Bouddhiques, pp. 202-205.

No direct mention is made in the Vinaya of laymen (upâsaka) associated with laymen, their reception as Upasakas, etc.

The discourse on the duty of benevolence, for instance, falls to the Dhamma and not to the Vinaya, since it is not addressed to the Bhikkhus but to laymen.

all that the Vinaya omits. It treats, therefore, of a great variety of subjects, and on this account does not, like the Vinaya, admit of so short and comprehensive a definition.

The doctrine regarding release from suffering, which forms so central an idea in the ancient Buddhist faith, belongs to the province of the Dhamma. But although the Vinava. according to its strict notion, has not to deal with this doctrine, still the religious ordinances there prescribed continually recognize and point to its existence. In the Dhamma we have an account of the inward process by which this release is accomplished, whereas the Vinaya treats only of the outward conduct of the life that is still struggling towards it. The Vinaya, which, as we have seen, is generally considered as co-ordinate with the Dhamma, appears, when regarded from this point of view, as a part of the Dhamma: and hence we can understand why it is that, side by side with those numerous passages which place the Dhamma and Vinaya in direct contrast, we may find, in the Buddhist texts, others, which bring the Vinaya within the province of the Dhamma.2

It is probable that the contrast as well as the connexion between the two ideas of the Dhamma and Vinaya originated in the earliest times of Buddhism—of this, however, we have no direct proof; but intrinsic evidence clearly points to this fact: and in further support of the same view, we may refer to the relation subsisting between the Dhamma and Vinaya and the Buddhist Trinity of Buddha, Dhamma and Sangha. It is immaterial whether we contrast Dhamma and Samgha or Dhamma and Vinaya, since Vinaya, as we have already seen, relates only to the Samgha.

It is mentioned, together with a series of other doctrinal subjects belonging to the Dhamma, in an enumeration that is frequently found repeated: dânakathâ sîlakathâ, saggakathâ, kâmânam âdînavo, okâro, samkıleso, nekkhamme ânisanıso.

In the Cullavagga we have the striking remark: ayam dhammavinayo ekaraso vimuttiraso.

² The Cullavagga relates how Upâli delivered the doctrines of the Vinaya to the Bhikkhus; the audience stand while listening to them "dhammagaravena." He who spreads false doctrines concerning the Vinaya is called an adhammavâdî (Mahàvagga, X. 5, 4). King Asoka, in the inscription at Bairāt (Corpus Inser. plate xv.), reckons the vinayasamâkâse among the dhammapaliyâyâni.

It may be objected, perhaps, that this division of Buddha's teaching into two parts presupposes too long a period for its development; this objection would perhaps be well founded, were it not for the probability that much of the preparatory work of Buddhism had been already done for it by the Brahmanical theology, and other sects which preceded it. So that, when the first Buddhist communities made their appearance, the outward religious forms for the new sect were, to a great extent, already fully developed.

Having thus far treated of the relation between the Dhamma and Vinaya, we will now proceed to consider their development, and in doing so we shall first consider the development of the Vinaya.

The origin of the earliest rules or laws laid down by the Buddhist community for the guidance of its members appears to have been connected with those assemblies of the Bhikkhus which met at full and new moon. The custom of holding these meetings seems to be as old as Buddhism itself, or perhaps older, for it may well be that the custom was borrowed from some of those earlier sects which preceded Buddhism, and upon which it was to some extent modelled. At these assemblies the monks of every district met together, and those who had committed offences were obliged to confess them and submit to the prescribed penance. A list of those offences which deserved punishment or some kind of expiation was, at a very early period, drawn up for the use of these confessional meetings. list was read out to the assembled Bhikkhus, and each one was asked whether he knew himself to be free from the sins there named. This list is called the Pâtimokkha, and is the earliest specimen of Buddhist Vinaya literature that we possess.

The opinion here expressed as to the position of the Pâtimokkha in Buddhist literature is, I am well aware, opposed to the views of most Pâli scholars. Mr. Rhys Davids 1 considers the Pâtimokkha of more recent origin than the works which form the great complexus of the Tipitaka, and assumes that at the time when the latter works were collected. the Pâtimokkha either did not exist or was of too recent a date to be admitted into the holy writings. I will try to give my reasons for taking an opposite view.

Although we do not find the Pâtimokkha in its entirety and in its original form in the Vinayapitaka, yet all its rules and ordinances, separately it may be, but word for word the same, are found there; and indeed the whole Vibhanga 2 is nothing more than an extended reading of the Pâtimokkha. We thus learn the occasion upon which each individual ordinance was promulgated by Buddha; then follows the ordinance itself; and then an explanation or illustration of the several terms employed in it. In some cases, also, the rule is further illustrated by a reference to cases which come within the rule, and to others which form exceptions to it.

The question is, therefore, whether the ordinances originally appeared with the explanatory notes as in the Vibhanga, the Pâtimokkha being subsequently extracted from it: or whether the Pâtimokkha alone was the older portion, the additional matter of the Vibhanga being the work of a subsequent revision.

In dealing with this question, it should, in the first place,

2 Vibhañga is the collective name for the two closely connected works which in the MSS, are called Pârâjıka and Pâcittiya. The latter titles are not old and may easily lead to mistakes. They are taken from that class of transgressions which are discussed in the beginning of each of the two halves; each work, however, in addition to discussing the one class of transgressions, from which it receives its name, treats of a number of others as well.

be observed, that if we read the ordinances of the Pâtimokkha, without the commentary of the Vibhanga, we find that they constitute one uninterrupted whole; 1 and, moreover, it frequently happens that a rule refers to the one immediately preceding it, in a manner that would be altogether unintelligible if the two had been originally separated by the intervening explanations of the Vibhanga.2

So, too, both the nature and effect of the explanations themselves seem conclusively to point to their later origin. Sometimes they extend the application of the rules, at others limit their operation, while occasionally they give directions for preventing their evasion. In some cases also the explanations substitute an entirely new rule, based upon a development of the law which took place since the framing of the rules.

A striking instance of this is seen in the proceedings against those Bhikkhus who by their evil conduct have set a bad example to laymen and their families (kuladûsaka pâpasamâcâra). The following account of these proceedings is given in the Pâtimokkha.3

The Bhikkhus are to remonstrate with the accused upon his course of life,4 and pronounce upon him sentence of banishment from his place of abode.⁵ If he resists and accuses the Bhikkhus of prejudice, they are to repeat the sentence; and if he should still persist in his obstinacy, they are to warn him three times to refrain from so doing.6 If this also proves of no avail, he is guilty of "Samghâdisesa," and has to submit to the penalty of the Manatta; and thereupon, before the assembled congregation, by the ceremony of the Abbhâna, it is to be shown that the penance has been undergone.

Now the details which the Vibhanga furnishes with regard to this rule of the Pâtimokkha permit of our distinguishing two different stages in the further development of the proceeding. The first of these is represented by the explanations added in the Vibhanga to the text of the rule, the second by the account, prefixed by way of introduction, of some special case that is said to have provoked the making of the rule.

The explanations upon the whole follow the course which the rule itself specifies; but they give more complicated orders respecting the exhortations to be addressed to the persons accused; they prescribe a greater number of repetitions of the exhortations, and cause these at first to be proposed by one Bhikkhu alone, and afterwards in the presence of the assembled congregation.¹

The picture of the proceedings against the Assajipunabbasukâ bhikkhû, as presented by the account in the Vibhañga, differs much more from the text of the Pâtimokkha. Buddha gives the following precept regarding this proceeding: pathamam Assajipunabbasukâ bhikkhû codetabbâ, codetvâ sâretabbâ, sâretvâ âpattim ropetabbâ, âpattim ropetvâ vyattena bhikkhunâ paṭibalena saṃgho ñâpetabbo: suṇâtu me bhante saṃgho. ime Assajipunabbasukâ bhikkhû kuladûsakâ pâpasamâcârâ. . . yadi saṃghassa pattakallam, saṃgho Assajipunabbasukânaṃ bhikkhûnaṃ Kiṭâgirismâ pabbājaniyakammam kareyya na Assajipunabbasukehi bhikkhûhi Kiṭâgirismiṃ vatthabban ti, etc. In place of the repeated admonition by the Bhikkhus prescribed in the Pâtimokkha. we find in these statements a peculiar ecclesiastical decree (Samghakamma), fulfilled by the Samgha, of which the Pâtimokkha knows nothing. The restoration of the penitent culprit then takes place by the revocation (patippassaddhi) of the Kamma, not by the ancient ceremonies of the Mânatta and of the Abbhana. It deserves to be noticed that in the same way as the Pabbâjaniyakamma is not mentioned in the Pâtimokkha, neither is there any mention of the similar proceedings of the Ukkhepaniyakamma, etc., however much occasion for it might appear.1

It seems to me unnecessary here to give any further enumeration of instances where the Pâtimokkha proves itself to be the older, as compared with what has been added in The publication of the works themselves the Vibhanga. will enable every one to make his own observations and to form his own opinions on this question. I will here merely point to the fact that the other two works included in the Vinaya, the Mâhavagga and the Cullavagga, although they do not stand in the same direct relation to the Pâtimokkha as does the Vibhanga, nevertheless distinctly pre-The Mahâvagga 3 gives precepts suppose its existence. concerning the recital of the Pâtimokkha, which put it beyond a doubt that the name Pâtimokkha refers here to that text which we also possess under the same name. Further, the laws against forbidden acts, scattered through the Mahâvagga and Cullavagga, clearly presuppose the existence of an earlier collection of those prohibitions to which they are the supplement. The difference between such transgressions as were in earlier times (in the Pâtimokkha)

² The Parivâra, the fifth Book of the Vinayapitaka, is of much more recent date, and, in fact, does not come into consideration in questions relating to the history of the origin of the Vinaya.

threatened with penance, and such as were added at a later period (in the Mahavagga and Cullavagga) to the old list, is also evident from the terminology used for the penance which followed upon a transgression of this kind. Pâtimokkha in this case uses the expressions Pârâjika, Samghâdisesa, Pâcittiya, etc. Now the circle of offences which constitute a Pâcittiya, etc., appeared in later times as completed; if a punishment was to be inflicted for a transgression not specified in the Pâtimokkha, they avoided using the expression Pâcittiva, because, in doing this, they would have made an unauthorized addition of new matter to the ordinances of the Pâtimokkha as fixed of old, which was considered as inadmissible. Hence an offence of this kind, if it was a slight one, was termed Dukkata; if grievous, Thullaceava. Any direct repetition of what had already been described in the Pâtimokkha was, in general, avoided in the detailed explanations of the Mahâvagga and Cullavagga. If circumstances, nevertheless, made it desirable to give a repetition of this kind, there was in the outward form of such allusions, without any exception, some reference to the corresponding propositions in the Pâtimokkha, as if to something that had already been determined elsewhere.1

The proofs given will be sufficient to show that the Pâtimokkha is the earliest literary record of the Buddhist Vinaya. Of the further development of the Vinaya literature from this foundation, the following stages may be recognized.

The first thing done was to make a commentary on the Pâtimokkha. The text of the ancient formulas was furnished, sentence by sentence and word by word, with explanations or a paraphrase. These explanations, when the redaction of the Vinayapitaka was subsequently taken in hand, were all admitted into it.¹

With regard to their form of expression, these explanations did not pretend to come from Buddha himself; there was no admixture of narrative or dialogical elements; it was a simple commentary on the words of the Pâtimokkha, without any ornamentation.²

These first two periods in the literary development of the Vinaya were followed by a third, characterized by the greater breadth which it gave to its literary productions. It started again—as could scarcely fail to be the case—from the Pâtimokkha, and in a twofold manner. In the first place, the old material was treated anew, in accordance with the characteristics of the new era. While in earlier times the fundamental laws themselves were arranged briefly and simply, and in the following period were explained and paraphrased in an equally simple manner, the epoch we are now speaking of had a HISTORY to relate about all of them, in many instances long series of histories, in all of which Buddha himself pronounces his decision as to which cases fall within the said regulations and which do not.³ This is not the only instance in the history of Buddhism, as of history in general, that the further removed, with respect to time, documents, or pretended documents, are, from the events themselves, the more accurate becomes the knowledge they pretend to contain of them. That the histories, which have in this manner been added to the several rules of the Pâtimokkha, have for the most part been invented, and, moreover, invented in an extremely awkward and conventional way, will be perfectly evident to every one who reads a series of them one after the other.

² The small portion of this commentary that is contained in the Mahâvagga (II. 3) furnishes a sufficient proof for these assertions. In some passages of the Vibhanga, the address bhikkhave (i.e. "O monks") is added in these explanatory parts, which mak 3 it appear as if Buddha was speaking. The character of the passages in question, however, leaves no doubt that this address has been added at the time of the later revision.

The new version of the Pâtimokkha, enriched with histories, is contained in the first two of the five parts of the Vinayapiṭaka, and bears the title of Vibhanga.

While the Vibhanga stands in the closest relation to the Påtimokkha, there was a new and wider circle of additions added to that same centre of the Vinaya-discipline—the Pâtimokkha-most probably about the same time in which the Vibhanga originated: an endeavour was made to go beyond the more confined domain of that series of ecclesiastical offences as established of old, to give a coherent picture of the whole legal life of the Samgha. They gave a detailed and connected account of the admission into the Samgha, of the ceremony of the Uposatha, of the annually recurring observances which were connected with the appearance of the rainy season, etc. The titles of the two works in which these accounts are given are Mahavagga and Cullavagga, comprehended also under the common title of Khandhaka. As in the Vibhanga, here also the outward form was arranged in such a way that in the case of every statute a history was given relative to the occasion upon which Buddha made the said regulation. The whole style of composition of the Mahâvagga and Cullavagga corresponds so exactly with that of the later written parts of the Vibhanga, i.e. the narrative portions, that it may be assumed with certainty that these texts were composed almost contemporaneously.¹ The histories, as a whole, are as undoubtedly pure inventions as those in the Vibhanga; this does not, of course, prevent their belonging to the most valuable sources for our knowledge of the life of the ancient Buddhist community. An essential difference between the Vibhanga on the one hand, and the Mahavagga and the Cullavagga on the other, lies in the fact that in the case of the Vibhanga the stories were added to an original basis of ecclesiastical regulations that had existed of old, i.e. the Pâtimokkha, whereas in the two other works the ecclesiastical regulations, and the stories given in connexion with these, were composed at one and the same time.

Taking all in all, if, on the one hand, we compare the short precepts of the Pâtimokkha, and, on the other, the stories, the endless pariyâya, the whole of the great apparatus that is brought forward in these Vinaya books, we shall find a very distinct contrast between the two literary epochs reflected in the said works. At the time when these later Vinaya works originated, the Buddhist literature was still far from the literary form of the Mahâvaipulyasûtra, but still a step in advance had been made on the path which subsequently led to it.

Without doubt, a careful investigation of the Suttapitaka would lead to similar results. As in the case of the Vinaya, we should be able to distinguish various strata representing the literary activity of those different periods. As I am too imperfectly acquainted with the materials in question, it is impossible for me, as yet, to make these investigations with the requisite accuracy. I must confine myself here to a few remarks.

Generally speaking, the probability is that the fixing of the fundamental doctrines of the Dhamma took place somewhere about the same time as the fixing of the fundamental laws of the Vinaya, that is, the fixing of the Pâtimokkha. If we may reckon the confessional-meetings, at which the Pâtimokkha was read aloud, as one of the most ancient elements in the life of the Buddhist community, then the need for an authentic fixing of the most important doctrines—the recognition of which united the members of the community among one another—can scarcely have been less old.

The earliest form in which these doctrines have been laid down was in all probability not that of the Sutta as we have it. These Sutta, as regards style, show the very greatest resemblance to the narrative portions of the Vinaya; the dogmatic doctrines are not stated directly, but are put into the mouth of the Buddha, and we are told of the occasion upon which he proclaimed them, precisely in the same way as the ecclesiastical prohibitions are manipulated in the Vibhanga. Now we have seen that the Vibhanga was preceded by an earlier period of Vinaya literature, in which the ecclesiastical ordinances themselves were given with all brevity, without being put into Buddha's mouth, and without being interwoven with any stories. It will not appear too bold a supposition to assume that the literature of the Dhamma developed The Buddhist community began, in a similar manner. in my opinion, with the fixing of the most important doctrines, such as the four Ariyasacca, the twelve Nidâna, etc., without employing any narrative form; if the Bhikkhus, at the time of their assemblies, propounded the Dhamma to one another, their discourses probably consisted of the recital of such dogmatical paragraphs. The same changes in the views and literary tendencies which have led to the composition of the Vibhanga, on the foundation of the Pâtimokkha, probably have caused that, as a development of these ancient Dhammapariyâya, the modern Suttanta were produced, in which the doctrines are no longer directly taught, but where the stories are told how Buddha had once propounded them.

Such scholars as have access to the Suttapiṭaka in its full extent, should test these conjectures by the texts themselves, and correct what proves to be erroneous.

We have as yet spoken merely of the relative age of the various parts of the Buddhist Holy Scriptures. In order to fix the date itself of their origin, we must first of all examine the tradition concerning the most important events in the earliest ecclesiastical history of the Buddhists, that of the three Councils.

According to the traditional and widely-spread story, Buddha's discourses were collected and fixed in an authentic form at the first Council, held a few months after the Master's death; this collection of the Holy texts is said to have subsequently been subjected to new revisions at one following Council according to northern accounts,1 at two Councils according to southern reports. If the tradition could be relied upon in this form, the questions we are engaged upon would in all essential points be settled by it; if it cannot, we must—before casting the statements concerning the Councils entirely overboard—examine what facts may perhaps be found to shine through them. It is possible that these facts might throw some light upon the history of the development of the Buddhist sacred canons, although perhaps in a different way than seemed likely before the test was applied.

We shall confine our examination, in the first place, to the first and second Councils, concerning which the records of the northern and southern Buddhists essentially agree; the third Council, which is known almost solely to the southern records, we shall speak of afterwards.

Of the accounts referring to the first two Councils, the single section of the Pâli Tipitaka itself which treats of these events deserves to be classed first. This is the closing chapter of the Cullavagga already mentioned. As the text of it will be given complete in my edition, I shall here confine myself to stating briefly the contents, in so far as they concern our present inquiry.

The tradition of the Councils takes up the thread of the story where the accounts of the life and work of Buddha, given in the Suttapitaka, end. After the death of the Master-so it is related in the Cullavagga-Subhadda, the last disciple converted by Buddha shortly before his death, proclaimed views which threatened the dissolution of the community. "Do not grieve, do not lament," he is said to have said to the believers; "it is well, that we have been relieved of the great Master's presence; we were oppressed by him, when he said: 'this is permitted to you, this is not permitted.' In future, we can do as we like, and not do as we do not like." In opposition to Subhadda—the tradition goes on to relate—there came forward one of the most distinguished and oldest of Buddha's disciples, the great Kassapa, who proposed that five hundred of the most eminent members of the community should assemble at Râjagaha, the royal residence of the ruler of Magadha, in order to collect the Master's precepts in an authentic form. It has already been said above, how, during the seven months' sitting of the assembly, Kassapa, the President, fixed the Vinaya, with the assistance of Upâli, the Dhamma with Ananda.

This is the story as it has come down to us. What we have here before us is not history, but pure invention. and, moreover, an invention of no very ancient date. Apart from internal reasons that might be adduced to prove this, we are able to prove it by comparing another text which is older than this story, and the author of which cannot yet have known it. I allude to the highly important Sutta, which gives an account of the death of Buddha, and the Pâli text of which has recently been printed by Prof. Childers. This Sutta 1 gives the story—in long passages word for word the same as in the Cullavagga-of the irreverent conduct of Subhadda, which Kassapa opposes by briefly pointing to the true consolation that should support the disciples in their separation from the Master. Then follows the account of the burning of Buddha's corpse, of the distribution of his relics among the various princes and cities, and of the festivals that were instituted in honour of these relics. Everything that the legend of the Council alleges as a motive for and as the background to the story about Kassapa's proposal for holding the Council, is found here altogether, except that there is no allusion to the proposal itself or to the Council. We hear of those speeches of Subhadda, which, according to the later tradition, led Kassapa to make his proposal, but we do not hear anything of the proposal itself. We hear of the great assembly that meets for the distribution of Buddha's relies, in which -according to the later tradition-Kassapa's proposal was agreed to, but we do not hear anything of all these transactions. It may be added: we hear in this same Sutta (pp. 39, 60, 61) of the precepts which Buddha delivered to his followers shortly before his death, concerning doubts and differences of opinion that might arise, among the members of the community, with regard to the Dhamma and the Vinaya, and with regard to the treatment of such cases when he should no longer be with them.

where, we should certainly have expected to find here some allusion to the great authentic depositions of Dhamma and Vinaya after Buddha's death, which, according to the general belief of Buddhists, established a firm standard, according to which such differences could be judged and have been judged through many centuries. There is not the slightest trace of any such allusion to this Council. This silence is as valuable as the most direct testimony: it shows that the author of the Mahaparinibbana Sutta did not know anything of the first Council.

We may assume, with some probability, that the fact of the second Council does not play an unimportant part among those circumstances which led to the origin of the legends concerning the first Council; such dualisms of the same occurrences are, as is well known, often met with in historical legends. The ideas, out of which the story arose, can scarcely be considered doubtful. Buddha was dead; the two other members of the ancient Buddhist trinity, the Doctrine and the Community, were to survive the Master. It can hardly seem strange that, in order to give this continuance the right legendary expression, an authentic settlement of the Doctrine by the Community was invented, and that, for the strict preservation of the chronological continuity, this settlement was supposed to have taken place directly after Buddha's death. To finish the picture of these proceedings, the Council of Vesâli furnished the necessary materials.\footnote{1}

The account of the SECOND Council stands in a very different position to the first with regard to its historical authenticity. The northern and southern records correspond in stating that the assembly was occasioned by ten deviations from the strict discipline of the carliest times, having occurred in Vesâlî. The ten points in question are extremely characteristic of the atmosphere in which the Buddhist community lived at the time. It was disputed whether the daily meal, in place of being partaken of at mid-day, might not also be partaken of when the shadows had attained the breadth of two fingers, and so forth. We thus perceive that the grand intellectual movement which we call Buddhism had even at that time lost the spirit of freedom upon which it was founded, and that it had degenerated into monkish ceremoniousness.

It is not my intention here to reproduce the detailed and most instructive account given in the Cullavagga of the course taken in the dispute concerning the ten doctrines; it is an account which, with all its pedautic snatching after trifles, bears the stamp of being in the highest degree trustworthy. The dispute was settled before an assembly of seven hundred of the faithful at Vesâlî; and the ten erroneous doctrines were rejected.

With this the Cullavagga closes its report of the assembly at Vesâlî. The story assumes quite a different appearance by an addition given to it by the later southern records, with which the northern records correspond in all essential points. The Dîpavamsa, for instance, says (5, 26, and following):—

"The eight mighty Theras destroyed the ten false doctrines and dispersed the wicked ones. After they had dispersed the wicked Bhikkhus and put down the false doctrine, the eight powerful Theras selected 700 Arhats in order to purify their own doctrine; selecting the best ones, they made a revision of the Dhamma. In the famous city of Vesâlî, in the Kûtâgâra hall, this second assembly was brought to a close after a period of eight months."

The difference between the earlier and the later account of the Council held at Vesâlî is of considerable importance for the history of the Buddhist holy literature. ing to the later version, we were expected to believe that this Council had revised the whole of the Holy texts; the earlier and undoubtedly authentic account knows nothing about this revision. If the later version were correct, it would be unintelligible that the very detailed earlier version of the acts of this Council should have omitted this main point, and had represented the insignificant disputes concerning the ten propositions as if the Council had been entirely occupied with them. We have already spoken of the influence which the Council of Vesâlî probably exercised upon the legend of the first Council. In the present case, conversely, at a later period, the account of the first Council had, to all appearance, reacted upon the second, and was the cause of the belief that a Dhammasamgaha was said to have been instituted by the Yasa, the Revata, and their associates, in the same sense as had formerly been said to have been done by Kassapa.

The result which this investigation furnishes to the question regarding the origin of the collection of the sacred writings, we may state to be this: the first Council is certainly brought by the tradition into connexion with the redaction of this collection, but this tradition contains no historical truth; the tradition of the second Council is historical, but in its authentic form it does not bring this Council into any connexion with the collection of the sacred books. Our inference is thus, for the present, a purely negative one; from the statements concerning the two Councils, nothing is directly gained with regard to the points in question. We shall subsequently have to return to the indirect results that might possibly be obtained; but we must first consider the THIRD Council. held under King Dhammâsoka. As is well known, the tradition in Ceylon concerning it is as follows:-

The acts of favour shown to the Community by Asoka induced a number of heretics to join the Community. For seven years the sacred ceremonies could not be performed, as the presence of these non-believers interfered with them. The King issued a command to the Community, through one of his officers, that the religious ceremonies must be observed; and, as this command was disregarded, the King's minister put several of the Bhikkhus to death with his own hand. The King, horrified at this proceeding, endeavoured to atone for it. The Bhikkhus advised him to invite the aged teacher Moggalîputta; the latter came to the capital, preached before the King, and assured him that the minister's crime in no way affected him. Moggalîputta then selected, from among the great host of Bhikkhus who had assembled in the capital, one thousand of them to hold a Council with him. The false doctrines of those who had forced themselves into the Community were denounced; Moggalîputta then, in a treatise called Kathâvatthu, described the dogmatic position held by himself and his followers, and proclaimed it before the Council. This work is still preserved in the collection of the Pâli Abhidhamma.

In the domains of northern Buddhism there is but little said concerning the third Council.¹ But it is incorrect to suppose that it was wholly unknown² there. That the references made to this Council are but rare may easily be accounted for.

It is well known that the period between the Councils of Vesâlî and Pâțaliputta is assumed by our records to have been the time of the origin of those schisms which separated the Buddhist fraternity into eighteen different schools. Moggalîputta, to whom is attributed the leading part at the Council of Pâțaliputta, was not an authority recognized throughout the whole domain of the Buddhist church (the very fact of the eighteen sects excludes such an assumption); he was, in fact, merely the head of one school. The Council, at which Moggaliputta formulated his own opinions, and denounced all views that differed from his own, resulted in a decisive triumph for his party over its adversaries. Thus it is perfectly intelligible that mention is so frequently made of these proceedings in the records of the Sinhalese, who consider themselves as belonging to the school of Moggaliputta, and so rarely, if at all, by the northern Buddhists. The tradition which ascribes the origin of differences of the schools to the period between the second and third Councils, and the fact that the northern and southern records speak much in the same way of the first two Councils, and not so with regard to the third, mutually confirm and explain each other. As a counterpart to the almost absolute silence in the records of the northern texts concerning Moggaliputta, it may be mentioned that Upagupta, whom the Buddhists of the north regard as the highest ecclesiastical authority under Asoka, is, as far as I know, nowhere mentioned by the Sinhalese.

After what has been said, we must not, from the fact that the northern writers do not allude to the third Council, entertain any suspicion of the Sinhalese historians having wilfully divided the facts belonging to the second Council, and framed two different Councils of them, or of their having referred to King Asoka—in whose reign the second Council was held—as to two different kings of the same As little would it be correct to say that the northern writers have described the second and third Councils as one. The two incidents have nothing whatever in common, with the exception of the accidental identity of names of the kings in whose reigns the events occurred; that most of the northern writers knew of or wished to know of but one of these events, is certainly as correct, as it is incorrect to assume that they turned the two into one.

The Councils of Vesâlî and Pâțaliputta, respecting which we have here expressed our opinion, are the fixed points in the history of the earlier form of Buddhism. In order to indicate the position occupied by other incidents belonging to this period, we must look for the circumstances which connect them with those primary events.

In the above investigation, we have already spoken of several facts which must be placed in the period between the Council of Vesâlî and that of Pâtaliputta. This period. first of all, saw the origin of the schisms, and was also the time of the development of the Abhidhamma literature. which was brought to a close by the proclamation of the text of the Kathâvatthu at the Council of Pâtaliputta.1 The composition of the closing chapter of the Cullavagga, which contains an account of the first two Councils, is, on the one hand, clearly of later origin than the Assembly at Vesâlî, and, on the other hand, of an earlier date than the origin of the schismatic schools and of the Abhidhamma books, for this identical chapter is met with in the Vinaya of the different schools at a corresponding place, and it does not mention the Abhidhamma among the sacred writings of which it gives a survey intended to be complete.

What, however, is the chronological relation between the origin of the main substance of the Vinaya (i.e. of the whole Piṭaka, with the exception of this story of the Councils, and of the Parivâra) and the Councils of Vesâlî and Pâṭaliputta?

The account of the Councils follows upon the actual closing chapter of the Vinaya, containing the laws for the ¹ It is scarcely necessary to remark that the contemporaneous origin of the schisms and of the Abhidhamma is not accidental, but that in it the natural connexion of the events is apparent. The same characteristic signature of that very stage of the development of Buddhism, which first advanced from the simple handing over and receiving of the doctrines, to a systematical dogmatising, shows itself both in the domain of literature in the origin of the Abhidhamma, and in the domain of ecclesiastical life in those disputes which have produced the great schisms.

Bhikkhunîs.1 It is evident that this account is written as the conclusion or an appendix to the Vinaya, and that, accordingly, the main substance of the Vinava laws was not composed later. It remains to be considered whether. at the time the closing chapter was composed, the principal part of the work did already exist as a complete whole. or whether the closing chapter and the other portions of the Vinava were composed at one and the same time. It seems to me that the first of these alternatives possesses by far the greater amount of probability, not to say certainty. And that for two reasons. First we must consider the circumstance that in the closing chapter the redaction of the whole Vinaya is said to have been made immediately after Buddha's death. Now, though this tradition is proved to be untenable, it surely follows from the very fact of its existence-with perfect certaintythat, at the time the story in question was written, the redaction of the Vinaya was not a fact just accomplished or still held in fresh remembrance, and that least of all can it have been a part of the same diaskeuasis which gave rise to the very story that transposes that redaction a hundred years back.

Another point deserving consideration here is the treatment or non-treatment in the Vinaya of those questions which formed the subjects of discussion at the second Council.

No reader of the Vinaya will hesitate to admit that this collection contains not an historical account of what Buddha permitted and forbade, but an account of what was regarded as allowable and forbidden at a certain period long after Buddha's time. Now the whole second Council was nothing more than a discussion on the permissibility of certain indulgences, a discussion which excited the attention of the whole community in the highest degree. We may with full assurance infer that if the discussions as to what was permitted and what forbidden, which we have before us in the Vinaya, were established after the time of this Council, it was next to unavoidable that, in appropriate passages, it should be directly stated how the Bhikkhus were to act with regard to the points so hotly disputed at Vesâlî. The materials for comparing the points disputed at Vesâlî with the doctrines of the Vinaya are all in our possession. The account in the Cullavagga concerning the Council even directly mentions, at each of the ten false precepts, where these are said to have been condemned by Buddha, so that we know upon what the ancient fraternity itself based the rejection of the ten heresics. Now we find that the text of the Vinaya, as we have it, does not in any way expressly touch upon most of these points; 1 that, in fact, it does not know of the propositions discussed at Vesâlî. The passages of the Vinaya to which the Cullavagga refers respecting the decision of the ten disputed points contain only general principles, not any express reference to the special subjects of the ten Vatthu. To these main propositions themselves are added—to facilitate the interpretation—fuller details, which touch upon a great number of special cases relating to the various rules; but the cases upon which the controversy at Vesâlî turned are not specified.² The texts of the Pârâjika and Pâcittiya—with the unwearied minute acuteness which is characteristic of the Indian mind-collect all the in any way conceivable possibilities that might apply to the propositions to be explained, in order to cut off every doubt as to the sense. Every one who knows the manner in which the discussion proceeds in these texts will not hesitate, with perfect confidence, to draw the conclusion that, at the time when these texts received their present form, nothing was as yet known of the ten Vatthu of the Bhikkhus at Vesâlî. The discussion of the ten propositions is given in the form of an account of the Council at Vesâlî, as an appendix at the end of the Vinaya; this, I think, is the best proof of the fact that when the dispute concerning the ten propositions was being carried on, the Vinaya itself already existed, that IT IS OLDER THAN THE COUNCIL OF VESÂLÎ.

² I shall for the present not give in extenso in proof of this all the passages that come into consideration here; the publication of the complete Vinaya will enable every one to form his own opinion.

Probably, however, not much older. If we fix the date of the composition of the Vinayapiṭaka, as handed down to us, too long before the Council held at Vesâlî, we shall thereby, first of all, come too close upon Buddha's own day, and it is further opposed by the prophecy of Pâṭaliputta being made the capital of the kingdom of Magadha, as contained in the Vinaya.¹ According to the statement of Hiouen Thsang, King Kâlâsoka, in whose reign the Council of Vesâlî was held, is said to have changed his residence, and removed to Pâṭaliputta; and, indeed, the royal residence had been removed there at the time the Council was being held, if the report in the Mahâvaṃsa (p. 17, l. 4) is correct. The removing of the residence of the Magadha kings to Pâṭaliputta must be anterior to the redaction of the Vinaya Piṭaka as we read it.

We shall now, in conclusion, draw up a list of the successive events in the literary and ecclesiastical history of the Buddhists, belonging to the period we have been discussing.

1. The Genesis of the Pâtimokkha. The earliest beginnings of the Dhamma literature.

- 2. The formation of the Commentary on the Pâtimokkha, which is included in the Vibhanga.
- 3. The Vibhanga is compiled; the Mahavagga and the Cullavagga are composed; origin of the main substance of the Suttanta literature.
- 4. Council at Vesâlî.
- 5. Origin of the legends of the Council at Råjagaha; composition of the closing chapter of the Vinaya.
- Schisms in the Buddhist community; origin of the Abhidhamma.
- 7. Council at Pâtaliputta; the Kathâvatthu.
- If, as is justified by Asoka's inscriptions, we assume the year 265 B.C. as the approximate date of his coronation, and we calculate 118 years back from this to the Council at Vesâlî—in accordance with the chronological system of the Mahâvamsa and Dîpavamsa¹—we shall find the date of this Council to fall somewhere about 383 s.c. From what has been said above, the revision of the Vinaya must have been somewhere before that time, but not much earlier. Hence we shall be right in conjecturing that it was not very far removed from 400 s.c. The error which might possibly arise from the inaccuracy of this calculation cannot at all events be a considerable one.

I do not think we shall be overestimating the literary productivity of the Buddhist Samgha by considering it possible that, during the first ninety years after Buddha's death, it had produced a literature of this great compass, and one so widely scattered in strata of an earlier and later origin. Let us compare it with the literary productions that emanated from the Socratic school during the seventy-seven years between the death of Socrates and that of Aristotle, or with the works of Kant and the philosophers who followed him, during the fifty years between the publication of the Critic of Pure Reason and the death of Hegel. The period of Indian history of which we are speaking was-this we must bear in mind-on the one hand, most seriously affected by the religio-ascetic thoughts which have created Buddhism; on the other hand, it possessed a perfect mastery of the literary form. most probable that other sects had preceded the Buddhists in laying down their ordinances for the community and their dogmatic principles in a literary form. What these sects had accomplished the Buddhists made use of; and, if nowhere else, they at all events found in the texts of the Brâhmana, of the Sûtra and Upanishad, prototypes for the development of a didactic material in a form appropriate for the further transmission to disciples. Fellowlabourers in the work were to be found throughout the whole Jambudîpa, wherever there were Bhikkhus to whom the doctrines of Gotama Buddha had found their way. Hence our opinion of the early origin of the Buddhist texts, based as it is upon external proofs, does not clash, but agrees perfectly with the internal possibility and probability.

We have hitherto endeavoured to describe the history of the development of the Buddhist Vinaya-literature without regard to the division of the schools, all of which have their own texts.² We pass on to an examination regarding that school, the Vinaya-texts of which have been preserved to us in Ceylon, and of its position among the other schools into which the Buddhist church divided itself.

1 The edict of Bairât has been brought forward to oppose the great age of the Buddhist Holy Scriptures in the form we now have them; to me this seems altogether wrong. King Asoka mentions in that edict a number of texts, the study of which he recommends to the fraternity and to laymen. He intended in no way to draw up a list of all the sayings of Buddha which the King considered as authentic, but to give a selection of those which he held to be specially deserving of study. The fact that only some of the titles mentioned in the inscription have hitherto been met with in the texts cannot cause the slightest hesitation. First of all the Pâli texts have not yet been examined so completely as will be necessary, and then we must remember that the same text was frequently known by several titles. Compare, for instance, the names which Buddha gives at the end of the Brahmajālasultu (Sept Suttas, p. 57) to this discourse (Atthajāla, Dhammajāla, Brahmajāla, Ditthijāla, Anuttarasangāmavijaya), or let us ask, who, at a first glance, would recognize the identity, of the Pārājika and Fācittiya with the Sūttavibhaūga, or the identity of the Agamas with the Nikāyas, etc. Thus the "Moneyasula," to which the inscription alludes, may be identical with the Sāmāāpahalasutta, if we must not rather identify it with the little discourse contained in the Tīkanipāta of the Aūguttara-Nikāya which begins: "Tīnāmāni bhikkhave moneyyāni" (see the Apāyavagga; fol. Jhai of the Phayre MS.). The "Munigāthā" most probably are the twelfth Sutta of the Sūttanipāta. The "Lāghulovāda," concerning falsehood, which is mentioned in the inscription, is the Ambalatthikarāhulovāda, the sixty-first among the Suttas of the Mājhima-Nikāya. The Vinayasamākasa (= vinaya-samākarsha) is, I think, certainly not the Paīvara, as Mr. Davids one supposed. This work, at least to judge from the Pāli version which is the only one I know, is undoubtelly of more recent date than Asoka; besides, on account of its form, which is somewhat like an index, it was of all the Vi in the torests, should have ever before him the tangers that might suddenly put an end to his life—serpents, savage animals, etc. (these are the "fears of the future"), and such thoughts should lead him to exercise all his energies in order to arrive at the goal of his religious strivings.

2 The opinion of Professor Wassiljew (Der Buddhismus, p. 68 of the German translation), that the Vinaya literature was the same in all the different schools, is, strictly speaking, not correct. It is true, only, so far as has yet been discovered, that the Vinaya of the different schools is based upon the same fundamental redaction, but this original Vinaya has assumed very different forms in the different schools.

Among the historical traditions of the Mahâvihâra in Ceylon, there has been preserved an account of the eighteen sects which arose during the course of the second century after Buddha's death; and we have several other similar accounts from the northern records. The various names in the different reports do not always correspond exactly; not only were different names given to the same school, but in the course of time more than eighteen schools arose, and the various reports selected from among these, first one and then another, in order to produce the number eighteen that had long been regarded as the established number. However, in spite of the lists not agreeing perfectly, we can, with sufficient certainty, discern several large groups of schools that are closely allied among one another.

Which is the school, the texts of which we have before us in the Pâli language? And with which other schools was it most closely connected?

According to the traditions of the Sinhalese, one of the schools possessed a claim to be considered as orthodox, on account of its having held fast to the original tradition of the Theras (mûlatheravâda); of course the Sinhalese church considers itself as belonging to this party. That the name Theravâdî was not a mere title of honour which the followers of this school applied to themselves alone, but that their right to it was generally recognized, is evident from the fact that Hiouen Thsang also gives this name ("Chang-tso-pou") to the Sinhalese community.

Now, in my opinion, it can be shown with tolerable certainty that this same school bore another name in addition, that of the Vibhajavadî (Vibhajyavadînas). From the reports of the northern Buddhists, more especially those of the Mahâsamghikâs and Sammatîyâs,1 we find, by the side of two other groups of schools2 which are in close affinity, the following third group: the Sarvastivadinas. VIBHAJYAVÂDINAS, Mahîcâsakâs, Dharmaguptakâs, Kâcyapîyâs, Samkrântikâs (by the side of the last we also find the Tâmraçâtîyàs mentioned here, which seem to be identical with or clearly related to them).3 Now the historical literature of Ceylon corresponding with the above gives the following group: the Theravadi, Mahimsasaka. Sabbatthavâdî, Dhammaguttikâ, Kassapikâ, Samkantikâ, Suttavâdî. If those names that are the same on both sides are left out, the result would most probably be the identity of the Theravâdî with the Vibhajyavâdinas.

2 Compare Wassljew, l. c. p. 249 ff, Târanâtha, Geschichte des Buddhismus (German translation), p. 270 ff.

Now this probability, it seems to me, becomes a certainty by the account in the Mahâvamsa concerning the third Council held under King Asoka. Asoka caused large numbers of heterodox Bhikkhus to be expelled from the community, and finally asked the true believers: Which doctrine did Buddha himself proclaim? They answered: He was a Vibhajjavâdî. Whereupon the King turned to the Thera Moggaliputta:-

> vibhajjavâdî sambuddho hoti bhante 'ti âha so. thero âmâ 'ti etc.4

The result seems certain: if the appellation Vibhajjavadî was known as the name of a school, and the Sinhalese tradition-and moreover in a passage where the point in question was to distinguish the true from the false doctrines -declared the founder of the church to be a Vibhajjavadi, Târanâtha, l. c. pp. 271, 272.

 In the centre of one of these groups stand the Mahâsanghikâs; in that of the other the Vatsîputrîyâs.

Tàranâtha, L c. p. 273.

it is clear that the Sinhalese recognized that school as the orthodox one, and reckoned themselves as belonging to it.

A somewhat different statement is given by FA IIIAN,1 who makes the express remark that the Vinaya used in Ceylon belonged to the Mahîçâsakâs. This cannot be correct. For, in the first place, the Sinhalese themselves considered the Mahîçâsakas as one of those sects which had gone off from the true faith; and, secondly, Hiouen Thsang gives the sect which prevailed in Ceylon a different Chinese name to that which he, as a rule, employs for the Mahîçâsakas. Yet this, at least, seems to result from Fah Hian's statement: the Vinaya of the Mahîçâsaka school must be remarkably like the version of the Vinavapitaka handed down in Cevlon.² Through the kindness of Mr. Beal I have been enabled to make a beginning on the comparison of the two versions. The task of proving in detail the relation between the texts of the different schools must be reserved for future investigations; it can scarcely be doubted that a knowledge of the original form of the Vinaya will, in this way, be attained with as much certainty as accuracy with regard to detail. It is self-evident that first of all the Chinese translations of the Vinayaliterature of several of the Buddhist schools must be examined in detail. Persons acquainted with the Chinese language, and who have access to these works, will be sure to receive the thanks of all interested in the study of Buddhism for every communication with regard to these important literary documents. Meanwhile, however, it will at all events be of interest to inquirers in this domain to become acquainted at least with the arrangement of the Beal, Buddhist Pilgrims, p. 165.

² It is probably not accidental that the Dîpavamsa mentions the Mahimsâsakâ first among those schools which branched off from the Theravada, and that the northern Ruddhists also are in the habit of mentioning the Vibhajyavâdinas and the Mahîçâsakâs side by side.

Vinava of the Mahîcâsaka-school, and to be enabled to compare it with the Pâli Vinaya. I shall, therefore, here communicate the remarks which Mr. Beal has had the kindness to send me relating to the Mahîçâsaka-school, and I shall accompany these with notes, giving the corresponding data relating to the Pâli version.

Mr. Beal writes:

- 1. "There is no division of the Chinese version of the Buddhist Vinava corresponding to that you name in the Pâli.¹ In the case of the Mahîsâsakas, the first section of the first division is called Po-lo-i, i.e. Pârâjika. second section of the first division includes the 23 (13?) Samghâdisesa rules. The third section of the first division is called Wou-teng, i.e. the Anityâ dhammâ. The fourth section of the first division is called Shi-sah, which I take to be = Nissaggiyâ. The fifth section of the first division includes the 91 (92?) Pâcittiva rules.
- 2. "The SECOND DIVISION includes eight rules for the Bhikkhunîs, called the eight Pârâjika rules. The remaining sections of this division contain rules for the Bhikkhunîs similar to those for the Bhikkhus.2
- 3. "The THIRD DIVISION contains, 1st, a life of buddha,3 2nd, Rules for ordination, residence during rainy season, etc. This evidently corresponds to the Mahavagga of the Pâli.
- 4. "The fourth division contains, 1st, a section called Mih-tsang, i.e. Adhikarana-samatha, rules for avoiding litigation, and 2nd, rules for holding sessions of priests (Samgha-kamma).4
 - 5. THE FIFTH DIVISION contains miscellaneous rules, and

² As yet all the data agree exactly with the Pâli Vibhañga, except that no mention is here made of the short chapters which in the Pâli redaction come in after the Pacittiya.

evidently agrees with the Pâli Parivâra. Under this last division, we have in Chinese the history of the Councils.

"In order to test the identity of the Pâli and Chinese versions, I will now give an outline of the first division. as it is found in the Mahîsâsaka school.

"The first section commences with a reason why the teaching of former Buddhas had not endured, viz. that like flowers, when not well fastened together, are scattered by the wind, so the teaching of Buddha, if not systematically arranged and bound together in order, would soon be dispersed by the opposition of enemies and heretics.

"Buddha then accepts the invitation of a Brahman, called Pi-lan-jo (Verañja), to partake of hospitality during the three months of wass. The Brahman forgets to fulfil his engagements, being immersed in bodily enjoyments; at the end of the three months Buddha goes to him and reproves him for his neglect.2

"Buddha then proceeds with his followers to the neighbourhood of Vaisâli, and here begins an account of the transgressions against the Law meriting expulsion.

- 1. "The sin of Sudana Karandaputra, who, having become a disciple, was tempted by his wife to abjure his vows of chastity.
 - 2. "The story of a Bhikkhu4 and a female monkey.
- 3. "A story about going to festivals and dances given by non-believers.5
- 1 More likely this section corresponds with the second half of the Cullavagga, and a section corresponding with the Parivara is wanting in the Chinese Vinaya.

 The story of the Councils which Mr. Beal mentions will be found in the Pali Vinaya, at the end of the Cullavagga.

2 All this corresponds exactly with the Introduction to the Vibhanga; the comparison also of the flowers which are scattered by the wind, is made use of in the Pâli text.

3 Pâli : Sudinno Kalandaputto.

⁵ Tan: Sudimo Kaiandaputo.

⁶ Tena kho pana: mayena aññataro bhikkhu Vesâliyam Mahâvane makkatim âmisena upalâpetvă tassă methunam dhammam pațisevati, etc.

- 4. "Specific transgressions, and their degree and guilt.
- 5. "The story of Danaka," a potter's son, whose wooden house having been destroyed by thieves, he built him a large stone house, which Buddha ordered to be pulled down.
- 6. "The story of a Rishi who was annoyed by the visits of a Nâgarâja. Bodhisatva ordered the Rishi to ask the Nâga for the Mani-gem concealed in his crest, on which the Nâga ceased to come to the Rishi. This story concludes with a gâthâ:
- 'Men do not like beggars, and they soon learn to hate them, The Nâgarâja hearing words of begging went away and never returned.'2
- "The SECOND SECTION of this division is taken up with stories about Devadatta.3
- "The other sections are occupied with stories relating to the subjects discussed in them, viz. with reference to clothes, medicines, bedding and other matters.
- "The second division, relating to nuns,4 is occupied by stories and instances of a similar character as those in the first division.
- "The THIRD DIVISION is occupied by a life of Buddha, from his election in the time of Dîpamkara down to the conversion of Sâriputra and Moggallâna." 5

So far Mr. Beal's communication in connexion with the Vinaya of the Mahîçâsakâs.

2 This story belongs to the second Samghadusesa dhamma. That the person who advised the Rishi was the Bodhisatva himself is not expressly stated; in fact, it seems that in the earlier texts the stories related there of past times ("bhûtapubbam") were only in few cases connected with Buddha himself, and with the persons surrounding hun, whereas this invariably happens in the Jataka collection. The verse 18 as follows:
"na tam yace yassa piyam jigimse, videso hoti atiyacanaya.

nago manim yacito brahmanena adassanañ ñeva tad ajjhagama 'ti." 3 Similar stories occur in the Pali text in the discussion of the 10th and 11th Samghádisesa dhamma.

4 Bhikkhunî-vibhanga.

Of the Tibet Vinaya, the Vinaya of the Mahâsarvâstivâdinas, we have the well-known detailed extracts of Csoma Körösi.¹ A comparison of the statements of these two scholars relating to the texts that have been examined by them, with the Pâli Vinaya, leads with perfect certainty to the following conclusion:

All of the different versions of the Vinaya are based upon one foundation; the arrangement of the material is the same in all; a large portion of the stories interwoven in the text correspond in all. It has been pointed out above, that of the elements which constitute the Vibhanga the narrative portions were added last; the addition of these stories was made at an earlier period than that in which the differences of the various schools arose. Even the story of the first two Councils—which is clearly the part of the Pâli Vinaya last composed, is also met with at the exactly corresponding place in the Vinaya of the Mahîçâsakas, and of the Mahâsarvâstivâdinas.

Hitherto, I have been unable to discover any traces in the Pâli Vinaya that the original text common to ALL the various versions of the Vinaya has here experienced any kind of alterations; and more particularly we find here no kind of interpolations showing special reference to Ceylon.² The diction also and the archaic colouring of the language is the same throughout the whole Pâli Vinaya; the easily recognizable and characteristic peculiarities of the later works admitted into the Tipiṭaka, and still more of the Aṭṭhakathâs, are altogether foreign to this Vinaya. Thus it seems to me very possible, and even probable, that the Pâli version represents the Vinaya in its original form, as it existed before the separation of the schools, and that the claim of the Sinhalese fraternity to possess the true Theravâda is well-founded. With regard to the two other schools, we can perceive the existence of later additions even in the short quotations from them which are all we as yet possess. These additions are by no means altogether unknown to the Sinhalese church, but they have there been placed in the Aṭṭhakathâs, so that the text of the Tipiṭaka, as preserved in Ceylon, has remained free from them.

With regard to the contents and the style of representation, the Pâli version has hitherto shown itself to be the most original, if not the original version. may with certainty be maintained that in one respect, in reference to the dialect, it differs from the original text. No one acquainted with the earliest history of Buddhism will entertain any doubt that the fundamental constituent parts of its sacred texts were first fixed in the kingdom of Magadha, and in the Magadha language. It is certain that the Pâli language is not the Mâgadhî language, and it is unnecessary here to repeat the proofs which do not leave the smallest room for doubt.1 Now, in the Cullavagga it is said that Buddha had decreed that every one should learn the sacred texts in his own language.2 This story will scarcely induce us to believe that such a decree proceeded from Buddha himself; however, it follows from this story with the greater certainty-what is of more importance for us-that at the time when the holy texts of the Buddhists were spread over India, they were certainly not handed over to the different parts of India in the Mågadhî language, but in the vernacular dialect peculiar to the several districts. It is probable that if the Buddhist doctrines had, at that period, been adopted in Ceylon also, and that the texts also had, at that time, been brought over to Ceylon, the old Sinhalese language would have been the one used there for these texts, in the same way as the various Indian dialects were used throughout India.

¹ Compare, E. Kuhn, Beitrage zur Påli-Grammatik, p. 7. Little as we can believe that in the Påli we have the Mågadhî language itself, as little can we assume that the Buddhist texts were originally brought to Ceylon in Mågadhî, and that there, under the influence of the Sinhalese, the language became changed into its present form, known as the Påli language; for the ancient Sinhalese language—as we at present know it from inscriptions—agrees with the Mågadhî in some of those very points which distinguish the Mågadhî from the Påli.

The course of events was, in fact, a different one. The Tipiṭaka was transplanted to Ceylon at a time when the tradition of the holy texts had lost the character of clasticity which allowed every one to take Buddha's words, and to adapt them to his own language. A beginning had already been made not only to watch over the substance of the words, but over the very letters themselves—over Nāma, Linga and Parikkhāra, as is said in the Dîpavamsa. Thus Ceylon received the sacred traditions in the language of that part of India from which the Tipiṭaka was brought over to the island, and in this same language—which consequently became the sacred language of the Buddhist community in Ceylon—the Sinhalese continued to propagate the tradition.

This language is the Pâli. But to what part of India did the Pâli originally belong, and from whence did it spread to Ceylon? There are two paths open for this investigation. By discussing the historical tradition one can inquire from which part of India Ceylon obtained its knowledge of the Buddhist literature; and secondly, on the basis of the ancient inscriptions, we may ask to what geographical limits the grammatical peculiarities are confined which distinguish the Pâli language from the other popular dialects of India? If no error is made in the inquiry, the results obtained from these two paths must agree. Our investigation will take up the first of these paths, and be continually controlled by the results that present themselves on the second of the two.

The tradition of the Sinhalese, we know, connects the conversion of the island to the Buddhist belief with the name of Mahinda (Mahendra), the son of King Asoka. The Mahâvamsa 1 gives some details concerning the descent and the birth of Mahinda. When Asoka, as a young prince, left for Ujjenî, in order, at his father's command, to undertake the regency of the country of Avantî, he, on his way thither, and in the city of Cetiva—also called Vidisa-married the daughter of a Setthi, and in Ujjeni she gave birth to Mahinda. Asoka resided in Ujjenî for ten years after the birth of Mahinda, but upon his father's death he removed to Pâtaliputta, and undertook the government of the whole kingdom. It is probableas probable as the whole account itself—that young Mahinda lived in Ujjenî with his father till the latter became king.

On these data, Westergaard,² and with him E. Kuhn,³ have assumed that Mahinda, when he spread the Buddhist doctrines to Ceylon, made use of the language of his native country, and that consequently the Pâli was the dialect of Ujjenî.

This hypothesis seems to me to possess but little probability. For even though we credit the statements of the historical books of the Sinhalese regarding the life of Mahinda, it is little in keeping with these to assume that the Prince made use of the Ujjenî dialect for his religious work. Mahinda joined the Buddhist Samgha in his twentieth year, six years after his father's being anointed, ten years after the beginning of his father's reign. It is hardly conceivable that he should have studied the literature of Buddhism in the language of his childhood, at a time when he had evidently for long lived at the royal court in Paṭaliputta, and that he should not rather have become acquainted with the works in the language of the court, it being, moreover, the language in which Buddha himself originally had taught his people.

Another difficulty presents itself. We are not yet acquainted, by inscriptions, with the Ujjenî dialect itself. But we have a safe support in the inscriptions of Bhilsa, which is identical with Vidisa, the home of Mahinda's mother.\(^1\) A lively intercourse was carried on between the town of Vidisa and the not very distant city of Ujjenî, as we learn from the numerous inscriptions found at Vidisa relating to citizens of Ujjenî. The dialect of the inscriptions of Bhilsa, however, differs in too many essential points from the Pâli for us to regard it as in any way likely that the Pâli language originated in this part of India.

Thus there are difficulties that cannot be overcome as long as we consider the traditions of the Pâli Tipiṭaka as connected with the person of Mahinda; it is impossible both to identify the Pâli with the language of Mahinda's youth and with the court language of his paternal home.

A fundamental mistake in the investigation seems to me to lie in the fact of their making Mahinda play so decisive a part. In fact, it cannot by any means, with the requisite strictness, be considered as sufficiently attested, that Mahinda brought the sa red texts to Ceylon.

Asoka's own inscriptions tell us that in the reign of this monarch steps were taken to propagate his beneficent maxims in a number of other countries, and also in Ceylon; 1 considering Asoka's well-known position towards Buddhism, it is also very likely that the missionaries who, at his instigation, went to Ceylon, were Buddhists. And hence, in all probability, the stories of the Sinhalese concerning Mahinda may contain some germ of historical truth. This germ, however, has become surrounded by a coating of inventions which render it impossible to place any faith in the traditions of Mahinda. Prince Mahinda himself, as the founder of the Ceylonese Bhikkhusamgha, the Princess Samghamittâ, his sister, as the foundress of the Bhikkhunîsamgha, the stories about bringing over the relics and the Bodhi-branch:—all this looks like a tissue of a little truth and a great deal of fiction, invented for the purpose of possessing a history of the origin of the Buddhist institutions in the island, and to connect it with the most distinguished person conceivable —the great Asoka. The historical legend is fond of poetically exalting ordinary occurrences into great and brilliant actions; we may assume that, in reality, many things were accomplished in a more gradual and less striking manner than such legends make them appear. Whatever we may choose to think about the Buddhist impulses that are said to have reached Ceylon from the court of Asoka, in my opinion the naturalization of the whole great Buddhist Literature in the island of Ceylon does not look as if it had been brought about by the sudden appearance of missionaries from the Magadha kingdom, but as if it were the fruit of a period of long and continued intercourse between Ceylon and the adjacent parts of India. It is self-evident that, at all times, there must have been a greater amount of intercourse between Ceylon and the peninsula of the Decean -more particularly the countries along the shore-than between Ceylon and Hindostan. Those acquainted with the ancient records relating to Ceylon will know of numerous proofs with regard to the relations in which Ceylon stood to the kingdom of Kalinga,1 and in such a case we should scarcely require any express proofs at all. The Kalinga country, or one of the adjacent kingdoms of Southern India, seems to me to have the most claim to having been the medium for transplanting the Buddhist literature into Ceylon.

In corroboration of this conjecture, I appeal, in the first place, to the geographical distribution of the Buddhist schools in India, according to the statements of Hiouen THSANG. The followers of the Sthavira school (Chang-tsopou), which predominated in Ceylon, are not mentioned by the Chinese traveller as met with in those parts of northern India, which have to be regarded as the true seat of ancient Indian civilization.2 The chief seats of this school-apart from Ceylon-are situated on the eastern shores of India, beginning at the mouths of the Ganges, and southwards, in the dominion of the Kalinga and in the country of the Drâvida; further, on the west coast in those parts which also stood in connexion with Ceylon, in Bharukaceha and Suråshtra; 3 in the Malaya kingdom the school is not expressly named, but mention is made of a monastery said to have been founded by Mahinda.4 It may be added that the same school also, probably, had its seats in the dominion of the Andhra, the neighbours of the Kalinga. Buddhaghosa frequently speaks of the views expressed in the Atthakathâ of the Andhra, so that it is a very likely supposition that the following.

² To this there is but one exception, which is, however, only an apparent one. There was at Gayâ, in the immediate viemity of the Bodhi-tree, a monastery belonging to the school Chang-tso-pou (H. Ths. iii. p. 487 et seq.), but it had been founded by a Ceylonese king, and always remained in connexion with Ceylon. This mon. tery is of interest from the fact that in all probability it has played an important part in the life of Buddhaghosa. He was born "bodhmanda-samipamhi" (Mahâvansa, p. 250); the place where he received the instigation to travel to Ceylon was most likely this very monastery.

Atthakathâ of the Andhra referred to the same redaction of the texts to which Buddhaghosa made a commentary.1

Perhaps, when we possess a larger number of ancient inscriptions from the kingdoms of the Andhra, Kalinga, and neighbouring tribes, we shall with greater certainty be enabled to determine which was the original home of the Pâli language. But even the inscriptions to which I, at present, have access, in my opinion, justify the assertion that the home of the Pâli language must, for better reasons, be looked for more to the south than to the north of the Vindhya mountains. Look at the inscription of the mother of Sâtakanni,2 King of the Andhra, found at Nâsik, or the important, but unfortunately, as yet, partially unintelligible rock-inscription of Aira Mâhameghavâhana,3 King of the Kalinga, discovered in Khandagiri. It will be found that the differences between the dialect of these inscriptions and the Pâli are not greater than can readily be explained from casualties relating to the different manner in which the texts were handed down on both sides.4

What I have said above will, I hope, give a certain probability to my supposition that the version of the Tipitaka preserved in Ceylon and its dialect the Pâli were brought to the island from the peninsula of South India, probably from the kingdoms of the Andhra or Kalinga. In this way we lose, it is true, a fixed date for this event, such as is given in the story about Mahinda;

³ Corpus Inscrip. Plate XVII.

⁵ Corpus Inscrip. Thate XVII.

4 There is an interesting example, by which it can be shown that in one instance at least an apparent disagreement between the orthography of the Pâli and that of the inscriptions did not exist at the time of Kaccayana, but was introduced into Pâli at a later period; the spelling bb of the Pâli (sabba, etc.), where the inscriptions give v, that is, vv (sav, etc.). Both Kern and Goldschmidt have made use of the spelling bb, in disputing the great age of the Pâli language. Thus it is an important fact that Kaccâyana did not write dibbate, but divvate v: a 10 v 236 ed Sengert) (vi. 2, 10, p. 236 ed. Senart).

we have no longer any right to regard Asoka's reign as precisely the date of the separation of the northern and southern tradition of the Tipitaka. The events which, according to our view of the matter, take the place of Mahinda's journey as a missionary, namely, the school Chang-tso-pou becoming naturalized in Southern India, more especially in the countries on the coasts, and its doctrines spreading to Ceylon, are such as do not admit as yet of any chronological determination. However, our investigations regarding the origin of the Vinaya offer some compensation for the chronological supports that are lost. If the view put forth above is correct-according to which the first four portions of our version of the Vinaya received the fixed form in which we now possess them about a century and a half before the time of Asoka, except as regards the dialect—there can scarcely be any great cause for lamenting the loss of those other chronological data.

It cannot be a matter of indifference to any branch of the inquiries into the development of the ancient Indian mind, whether we can safely assume the origin of a collection of works of such great compass and of such varied substance as the Buddhist Vinaya, to have been a century and a half carlier than the origin of those literary documents which were hitherto believed the oldest of those, the origin of which can be traced to a certain time. May those eminent scholars who have solved many a tough problem in the domain of Pâli and of the Buddhist literature, lend us their assistance in leading the investigations which these observations are desired to excite, to safe conclusions!

Before I conclude, I beg to express my sincere thanks to the Royal Academy of Sciences in Berlin and to the India Office in London, by whose support I have been enabled to publish this work. The India Office Library, the Royal Library in Berlin, and, at the request of the German Imperial Foreign Office, the Bibliothèque Nationale in Paris, have, with the utmost kindness, placed at my disposal the manuscripts upon which the edition is based. I beg to express my gratitude also to the high authorities and to the administrators of these libraries.

Jataka i. p. 66-81; the Northern Buddhists spell this name Rudraka Râmaputra. — 8, Kâsînam A D, Kâsinam C, Kâsiyam B, Kâsinam or Kâsînam E. —andhibhûtasmi AC. —âhañhi AE, ahamhi B, âhañei C, ahañhi D. —amatadundubhîti D (not E). 9, yathâ pi kho B. —hupeyya âvuso A, hupeyyâ âv° B, hupeyyam âv° C, hupeyya pâvuso ti âvuso evam pi nâma bhaveyya DE. -okampetvâ AC, okappetvâ ("sîsam câletvâ" DE) BDE.— 10, avaddho bahullaya ti D. —paccupathapetabbo AB, paccuthâtabbo C. —11, apissu AB, api sudam C. — 12, samudâcarittha C. — The Jâtaka Atthakathâ (i. p. 82), which quotes some words from this passage, offers the reading: aham bh° tathagato sammasambuddho.— 13, 15, cariyâya B, iriyâya A, cariyâya corrected to iriyâya C.— 13, uttarimanussadhammam C, °mmâ AB. —bâhulliko AC, bahulikato B. — uttarim manussadhamma A, uttarimanussadhammam BC.— 15, uttarim manussadhammâ A, uttarimanussadhammâ B, uttarimanussadhammam C; the same at both places.— 16, me tumhe B. —abbhâsitam A, abbhâvitam D, bhâsitam BE. The comment explains the word: vâkyanâdan ti. -asakkhi kho A, asanthiko corrected to asakkhi kho C, asakkhi ko (or: aso to?) B, aso vo D. —puna sussimsu A, susisum B, vacanam sussisu C. Probably we ought to read: puna sussûsimsu.— 17, atthakil° B.— 20, °nandini ABC. 27, paccaññâsi ABC.—28, paccaññâsi AC.—29, idam avoca ... abhinandanti is omitted in BC; in C these words have been inserted afterwards. — 30, ca pana bhagavatâ C. —evam A.C. etam B.— 31, devânubhâvan ti BC. — Aññâkoṇḍañño (at the first place) B. The Jat. Atthav. (i. p. 82) and the Dhammap. Atth. (p. 119, 125) read Aññâkondañña, but the Lal. Vist. (p. 529 ed. Calc.) reads Ajnâtakaundinya.— 32, C almost constantly reads svåkhyåto. —tassa åyasmato Kondañassa A. 35, nihârabhatto iminâ nihârena C, nihârabhatto A, iminâ hârena B. -B inserts nîhârabhatte, which is corrected to °bhatto, before tayo.— 39, vedanâ bhikkhave anattâ C. labbhetha ca vedanâyam A. —na ca labbhati vedanâyam AB. 41, viññânam bhikkhave anattam C. — 42, kalla nu kho tam C.— 43, kallam nu kho tam C.— 46, evam ayam AC, evam assa B. The reading evam passam, which I prefer, occurs in the corresponding passage of the Anattalakkhanasutta as well as of the Cûļarâhulovâda (Berlin MS. of the Suttasamgaha). Comp. also i. 21. 4.— 7. 1, hetthâ pâsâdam A, h° pâsâdâ B, h° pasâdâ corrected to h° pasâdam C. —pi niddâ okkami A, pi pacchâ niddam okkami C, pi niddâ okkamati parijanassâpi pacchâ niddam okkami B.— 2, mudingam A, mudigam C. —vikesikam A, vikkesikam C, vikkhesitam B. vikkhelikam AC, vikkhelikam B. —aññâ vippalapantiyo C. santhâti C. —idam upaddutam A. —idam upassatham A.— 3, abhirûhitvâ B.— 6, dukkhasamudayam nirodhamaggam The same reading constantly occurs in this MS .- 7, В. catuddisâ A, catudisâ C, catusu disâ B.— 8, AB omit idha nisinno. — 9, api nu bhante AC. — 10, dakkhintîti B, dakkhantîti AC. The former spelling generally prevails in the Ceylonese MSS., the latter one in those brought from Burmah. —so ca loke C.— 11, vimucci C, vimuccati A, vimuttam B.- 14, làbhà AB, sulabhà C. - suladdham A, suladdham làbha B, làbhisuladdham C. —ajjatanaya AC, ajja svatanaya B.— 8. 3, tâ ca loke AB, tâ ca kho loke C.— 9. 2, ime me bhante A, ima bhante B, ime ca kho blante C.—10. 1 and 2, janapadà ABC. Probably we ought to read janapade, comp. Bârânasiyam setthânusetthînam, in the preceding chapter. — 2, ime me bhante AC, ime bhante B — 4, sâ tesam A, sâva t° C, yâva t° B.— 11. 1, muttâham AB, muttânamham C. —manussâ constantly C. —mâ ekena maggena C. agamittha AC, agamattha D, agamete corrected to agamatta B. -aham hi bhikkhave B. -Senânigamo corrected to Senâninigamo B, Senanigamo A, Senonigamo C .- 2, bandhosi ABC. —mahâbandhanabandho A, Mârabandhanabaddho corrected to mahâb° C, Mârabandhanabandho B. —muttoham B. —mahâbandhanamutto A, Mârabandh° B, Mârabandh° corrected to mahâb° C. —nîhato B. —bâdhayissâmi ABC; the true reading apparently is bandhayissâmi.— 12. 3, pabbâjetum upasampâdetum ti A, pabbâjetha upasampâdetha B, and thus reads C, where it is corrected thus: pabbajetu upasampâdetum. DE: pariyâtevvan [parivâdiyevvan E] ti abhibhavevva vâ vinâsevva vâ. - 4, abhisamkhâritvâ AC, °kharitvâ B. It ought to be corrected: abhisamkhâretvâ, comp. i. 7. 8. —nâge AB, nâgo corrected to nage C. In § 6 all three MSS, read nage. The agreement of the two passages makes a correction like nagena na vihethiyati (vihethiyissati), highly improbable. I suppose, that nâge is a Mâgadhî nominative, the occurrence of which may easily be accounted for in a legend founded on popular tradition. — 5, pariyâditvâ B. — 6, vihâremu C. —aggisâlâyan ti A. —phâsukâmo va A, pho ca BC. —vibodhesîti AC. —nam AC, tam B. —disvâna C. —sumânaso C, sumanaso A, suppasannamanaso B. —agyâgâre B. —vihedhiyatîti C.—7, hatâ A, hatâ ca C, yâva B. -C inserts kâļâ after lohitikâ. -kâye A, kâyena B, rûpakâye C.- 16. l, upasamkami AB, upasamgami C instead of upasamkamimsu. -pi nâma mahanto B.— 2, upasamkami A.C. —pi nâma mahantâ B.— 17. 1, vannânipabhâhi B.— 2, vannânipabhâhi B.— 18. 1, vannâtipabhâhi B. - 2, vannâtipabhâhi B. - 19. 4, akâsîti AB, akâsiti C .- 20. 1, mahati all three MSS., instead of mahatim (the same in § 2, 4 and 5).— 2, A inserts pamsukulam before âlambitvâ, in B this word is included in brackets, in C it is omitted. —adhivatta AB, adhivatha C (the same in § 5). —C inserts pamsukulam before âlambitvâ. —parivisajjeyyan ti C. —parivissajjatu ti B.— 4, upanikkhittâ A.— 5, A inserts pamsukulam before âlambitvâ. —âharahattho AC, arahanto B.— 6, tvam gaccha B.— 9, idam kho para Kassapa B.— 11, sugandhikam A, gandhasampannan ti B, gandhasampannam rasasampannam C. -BC omit sace åkankhasi . . . tvam yeva tam ganhâ ti. —yeva tam A (at both places); comp. § 9.— 12, aggim A, aggi BC. —sakim deva all three MSS.
